

But that's it. This is Lucinda Harlan. I can't call her name.

(Lucinda Harlan:)

Begins with a B, I think.

(She was teacher there.)

Yes. She wasn't mine. I wasn't born yet.

(Yeah. That was before your time though. Before 1900. She looks like a full-blood Indian too.)

Yeah, she is. That's Mr. A.W. Kennedy. 'Course that's in my day, you know.

(1912. And they gave out public school souvenirs. A picture of A.W.Kennedy, on the front. Well. White Oak school. District no. 47. A.W.Kennedy, teacher.

Well, isn't that interesting.)

Mrs. Kennedy had that and I took 'em. Had them stamp me one off in town there.

I would have thought those machines would have done a better job than that.

(Well, I'd think so. Let's see in 1912 the school officers for White Oak school were J.M.Butler and Mr. Haynes and Joe Rafferty.)

Joe Rafferty.

(Yeah. Joe Rafferty.)

That's my--

(Let's see. That's your folks, isn't it?)

Uh-huh.

NAMES OF PROMINENT FAMILIES IN EARLY DAYS

(Well, let's see in 1912 some of the families here were the Secondines and the Moore and Hurd and the J.Browns.)

That James is supposed to be Jones. They didn't print it right.

(Yeah. And the Miles, the Jones, Butler, the Hardin, and Agnew.)

Agnew. Now that's my husband.

(Yeah. And the White Acre and Casto, Rafferty.)
