

remembers it.

(He just left the country then.)

Well, when Sam, you know, Sam--you've heard of him?

(Yeah.)

He was quite a big lawman. He went after somebody, he meant to capture 'em.

(Yeah, I've heard of Sam Ridenouer.)

I've heard of 'em shipping whiskey on the railroad. I supposed they had it camouflaged.

(Yeah.)

I heard dad tell that. They throw it out here where this--I showed you a picture where that place was.

(Where they had the depot here.)

Maybe someone come along and steal it before they got away--the bad man.

(That would be terrible.) (Laughter)

You had to know exactly where it was coming in.

(Yeah.)

They'd sell it to these Indians.

OLIVER HAYNES MADE MONEY OFF OF THE INDIANS

(A lot of things have gone on here, I know, in its day.)

Oh yes. Now when Mr. Haynes started making most of his money when these Shawnees. Well, they was mixed in with Osages too, you know.

(Yeah.)

They drew quite a bit on money. 'Course the Shawnees drew money. So did the Cherokees. But see they drew quite a bit. They Cherokees they just had a poor relation.

(Yeah.)

They'd buy these big Buick cars. And they'd come driving up here to Haynes
