

Conroy. All them, Anybody. Conroy is a Wyoming Arapaho. He married into Cheyennes.

(Do any of the Sankeys play in these hand games?)

I don't know. Whenever they want to, I guess, I haven't seen them playing hand game. They don't hardly go any anywhere. Even Warren--I seen his wife one time at Fonda. And his brother. But seem like I don't know what's wrong with them. You know that Madeline, oh, she used to come after me all the time--every day--maybe every other day. Now she ain't got a thing to do with me. Right now. I don't know if she got mad some way--she got mad because my granddaughter beat her daughter in this election. She don't--they don't come too much. Maybe they thought I campaigned for my granddaughter. They just don't talk to us any more. The other day she brought her grandson to play. She didn't say anything. And I didn't even know when they came after him. Bobby. And every time they come after him she used to come in here and visit. And they don't even come in my house any more. It don't bother me.

(Do the Bate's ever go to hand games--Amanda and Henry?)

No. They don't go. Maybe if it was close enough they would go, but you know Amanda can't see very good.

(...?)

Yeah, these people in town, they always have hand game. We thought they would have something doing at Barefoot Park this weekend. I was figuring on moving over there with my tent and stay if they was gonna have hand game. But they ain't doing nothing. So I don't hardly go anywhere. Just when my niece stop by and pick me up, I go with her. I go with Verna. Verna Hamilton. She picked me up yesterday and we went to the dance. She lives west of that cemetery south of Canton. Way on the hill is her house. It's her son that was killed a few weeks ago. That one that got killed on his motorcycle. Her oldest boy. Boy, I tell you that was a...I was sitting
