

of California. There's some Indians just talk like us. And that's some of the group that went that way. And some of these that want west....they came to a big mountain, and then they went over it...they went over it just as far as they could go. And they are the...let's see what they are now? I forgot the names of those Indians up there...and they just talk like us...those Indians out there now. I think they call them...I know them by their Indian name.

There Indian names are "Eh-kie." Is there Indian name.

(What does that mean?)

It means red...red Comanches. That's what they call them...Eh-kie now. And the ones that went over to Denver and in there...and they went on to the state of Wyoming. And those Indians up there just talk like us. My Grandmother told me that, and she said, "When ever you..." she was telling me story when I was about twelve years old. She tell me all kind of stories about the Indians. She said, "When you get old and old enough to travel, I want you to go south, and west to California...see those people that talk like us. They the ones that just disappeared, never did come back. And these the ones that went over to Wyoming." And she said, "I heard they over there now, and the ones that went over the mountains, they still over there. They all talk like us. They come from the Comanches..... they belong to the Comanche tribe." And that what my grandmother told us. And so three years ago, we made a trip. We went to New
