

They...eh...the Shoshones live in a reservation at Ft. Washington. North from Lander...kind of northwest from Lander. Town of that name. That the town we went on then from the reservation and there's a bunch of just here and there and like that. All in groups, you know. They live close to one another, you know, not like us. We live so many miles away from each other. All in this reservation, but then they live right like this and they have everything going on. They don't work, they don't do nothing. Just all day long, they drum and sing and dance and everyday there's something going on and gambling is the biggest part of it.

(How do they gamble?)

They deal. Just like there's a group of womens like...why this women deals and here we call it money game. And deal and this woman she gives you a pile of money and then she deals and then...one of the womans cut the cards and hangs on it. She do like that...put a card then another one and say, "Which card do you want?" Either King or Queen would come up....together, you know. And I want the King. Well, when the King comes up, she push her hands like that and pull that card. When she pull that card, if its a King, they win. And then she pays everybody double. Just like if you betting two dollars, you win at the door like that....you get King...you get King like that.. and you get at the door, she pays you four dollars. And if she goes broke...if the card is better...there's another one that she gives. That's all they do, everyday. But here, you know, people works, but I heard nothing.
