

No, that's right. It was something that they thought that it was one of the best things that could happen to them--mankind. And there is a--I had that related to me by one of my elder relatives. A uncle of mine--he was related to me--when he was getting old you know. He said, "You know" he said, "My father," he said, "Told me, it's good to be"-- no, no, he said "It's good to be an old man also." And then he explained it. He said, "The bad part of getting old," he said, "Your limbs they go to getting weak on you. It's not the getting around" he said. "They go to getting weak on you and your eyesight starts leaving you, your teeth start leaving you, and loses your hearing." And he said "Now that's the bad part of it." But he said "The good part of it" he said, "Is, your are closer to--you know to your Happy Hunting Ground" he said. And he said, "There is no such thing as what we have here on this earth." And he said, "That's the best part of it." And he said, "That's the only thing I'm waiting on now is that." "That" he said "I'm waiting on Almighty God," he said. "The day that he will take me to that Happy Hunting Ground," he say "Where everybody is happy." And that's the way the Indians you know thinks of it that way. And same way with Bible. Bible speaks of it same terms. Yeah.

(Yeah I know the Bible says, cry at birth and rejoice at death.)

Yeah.

(Now you know Indians back there. I don't know what kind of ceremonies they perform, they had dances you know when they died.)

Yeah. Right. Yeah. That's right. They had their celebrations you know because of the good things that happened there. But there has been so many changes. So many things that's changed you know--changed about. And this grief is something that our Creator has created too, see. And then as we come along, there's one point there that my people are very emotional whenever they lose a person you know. Women before you know cut their hair, they cut themselves--mans you know, they cut themselves. Well, that's the hurt
