

Yeah. That's something--that's something they believe in that. Yeah. That's right.

(I mean it's not just--I mean it's the old way you know. Like you believe so strong and you love a child so much you know, that they come back and--)
Yeah. It's a heal you know. It's spirit you know, natural thing that happens you know. And I don't know personally--lot of times I think of this thing pretty deep you know, this life. Pretty deep this life. After all you know we are not here but just so many years. And this old earth has been here millions and millions of years you know. And I thought--I have thought and I think now that these things--this thing is just a cycle you know--cycle going round and round you know. There's people born and when passes away are reborn again you know just like that you know. And it's just all in this universe. May be out other places too, I don't know. Just like Billy Graham you know, said that God is everywhere. Said where there is God there is people he said. (laughs). So those things are something that they think about you know as what he was--said you know, Pretty deep thought there you know. But our old people had the same things--these chieftans. People that had a chieftanship you know they had it within themselves that they had God within them. And--when I first heard that remark made by my father--because he always knew it because he read the Bible. He head the Bible four times. That's Indian tradition I guess--read the Bible like the way he should. But he knew a lot of things in there--passages in there that he could pick out and refer to the Indian you know--ways you know. Because he really believe in his Indian ways because he was raised by his uncle you know--Indian way you know. And that, he had very much respect for the Bible. He had respect for the Indian way because, they were identical. But he says the thoughts within them; and I in turn you know with these minds that I have faith in both beliefs you know, that they are together. And our Indian people were given to this life, here on this continent here, to live as he was you know. And to do whatever he
