

(You said they wanted your boy to marry that girl--?)

Oh, no. This girl was a Red Chin.

(Were they Arapaho?)

Cheyenne.

(This (name withheld) -- is he from Wyoming?)

He's from Wyoming. He's married to (name withheld). He's a bad character.

(Well, that's a real interesting story about your boy and that bull talking to him. This rock is really interesting--it does look just like a brain. It's got a groove around the middle of it and it's all gnarled or knotted like it is. Have you ever used it yourself for anything?)

No, I just put it away and showed it. I don't know how I would use it.

He never did tell me how to use it. But of course we believe in keeping it the way he said we should keep it.

(You know these men that wanted it and tried to get it from you--like Old Man Hoof--what would they have done with it?)

They wanted to use it to, you know, pound their medicine. But they're gone, these old people.

(To pound their medicine?)

Yeah. You know they always make their medicine soft, and they wanted to use it.

(Was Old Man Hoof a doctor?)

Yeah. He was an Indian doctor.

INDIAN DOCTORS: MAKING THEIR MEDICINE

(Who were the others--Rising Bear--?)

Young Bear.

(Were they doctors, too?)
