

want you all to come listen to me." (Words not clear), you see; but if the people were interested enough to have me come down and talk at these meetings these different things, then, they would have known a long time ago exactly how I stood. You can't go out and get people to come and listen to you unless they are interested in it. Now, I hope that if I'm elected and get the--to represent you people as your chief, then, you will every once in a while have these meetings to where--and invite people that you want to talk to you to come down and tell you about these things. Then, you can get so much more done. Four years is all the time that I will ask you to do it. Just have a little coffee or something like that to call people in to talk. I've never been invited to one yet, not once.

Alice: Everybody become a each of interest and we're busy with our own personal things and we don't find time. We don't take enough time. Really, what's it all about is up to now; you have elected a council. Well, that's their business. Let them go ahead and take care of it. Nobody ever shows up. (Words not clear). I hope that if I do get to represent you, I hope that the Osage people pack that council room there at every meeting. They should do it because you take the Creek Nation, Mr. Dode McIntosh is one of the finest chairmen and one of the finest chiefs and he's done more for his people. They don't even have any money at all, but they really got a good program. Whenever they have a council meeting, they got to get a great big room. I mean everybody shows up.

Background voices: (Contents irrevelant)

Well, sure, that's what a council is for to do the things that the