Alice: Well, obviously, something is wrong. (Words not clear) property is low and we have inflation. Everything is off.

But, in my opinion, what it is: it's just like the state of Oklahoma, in being a political Two party system in any thing is good because you have competition, but you let group of people get in and run something over a great number of years. They're not alert, only just for themselves. I think that this time, people should begin to think about new faces on the council regardless who they are. Let's get some new faces on there because we already know the old faces. In one case, one man has been on the council for 24 years. I don't imagine there's, I'll say, 25 full blood people in the tribe whose ever seen him around any where to rub elbows with, either to respect the Indian in his own way. That time is over. The state of Oklahoma went through that very thing. Now, we got a two party system, and we begin to get a lot of things we never had before; and Kansas was the say way. They've had Republicans in up there for hundred years, and it's time for them to get Democrats. It's time for us all to get Republicans here because they just think one way. Two party system in anything is good, even in your own church work, You'll have one little group that just want to run the whole thing. You have another group in there that makes a competition and that's good.

Alice: Ponca Indians started with nothing. They were a very poor tribe. Now, they're really working and they're accomplishing great things.
