

(Well.)

He could just tell you.

(Well, I want to see him when he gets to feeling better.)

And he could, well, he probably, I'm going up there this evening some-time or another. If you're going to be around Tahlequah this evening, my mother and daddy could tell you. They were, now this Sutton...

In fact, he was the one that had the first post office down here at Hanson. But I just can't tell you. Now, I might just find out.

I don't remember that far back, but I will find out for you. /static/

(That was also a little community and settlement.)

Sweet town.

Yeah. Sweet town. Well, they had a school there also.)

They had a school there. If I can find /not clear/ Hill.

/Unidentified voice/: I know where Sweet town is because that's where...

(Let's see, Sweet town was about a half mile southeast of what is not Atkins. On the east side of the little branch.)

/tape skip/

Do you know where this Chamber of Commerce information center up here at Sallisaw? Now, that was moved from there. And that's where that small cemetery is that I was telling you about while ago.

(That school at Sweettown was called Sweet Spring school then.)

No...

(Sweet Springs is in on the other side of, west of Sallisaw.)

The Sweet Spring.

(Yeah.)

It's an old school. And there's a Taylor down here that spot where that old place is. I can't think of his name. All I can think of is Taylor. He knows just where it is. Up there toward Indian Hills where the family's cemetery is now. But that place Sweettown now is /not clear/ place. I thought you would be to see this book.
