

(Your mother.)

She first married Collins and had one daughter, Ida Collins. And then she married Mr. Goodell. And he was the banker of Collinsville and then he went to Tulsa. And they both died--They were living in Tulsa when they died. My sister died first. And then Mr. Goodell died. They had one son, George Goodell. And he's with the...His's in California. He's with the, oh, what is that--baseball...Gene Autry. It's that company. And this Goodell just has the one boy, George Goodell. And they died in--Mr. and Mrs. Goodell were living in Tulsa.

(Did your father live here in Claremore or did he live out Nowata?)

Well, he then, after Mr. Journeycake died, and then after the Civil War, my father, he was a doctor--And he finished at Tulane. Was a graduate there. Then after the war he came on up to Fort Gibson.

(Yes.)

TRACES THE ARCHER FAMILY

That was the fort after the war. And Mr. /name not clear/ Blythe, the /name not clear/ Blythe, he had married one of the Archer girls. The Archers of Mt. Zion..

(Yes, I know them.)

Well, he married the oldest one, Molly Archer. And Mr. Wright had married before the war and his wife, his first wife was, who was she? But, anyway, he had one son, John Wright. You've heard of him. He lived at Nowata. And he married Lula Foreman of the Foreman that lived up here. Taylor Foreman's oldest daughter. And then, after--after the war, then Mr. Wright wasn't married at this time. He'd lost his wife. And he was a Fort Gibson and had a store down at Fort Gibson. And papa came up to Fort Gibson and he met Mr. Wright there. And course they, you know there weren't many places around there, but papa and Mr. Wright-- Mr. Wright was from the east. He and--I believe the state of New York. I know one of those--his brother, younger
