

know.

(Uh-hum.)

And well lots of times I don't go into the meetings because, you know, they usually have it in Creek and I don't understand Creek well enough to understand everything they talk about. Everything they preach about. Although I can sing with them if I know the song. I learned to read in Creek. And I can read the songs if I know the tune. You know I can sing with them if I can find it in the book before they get through singing.

ADULT EDUCATION CLASSES AND HOME EXTENSION MEETINGS

But speaking of Adult Education classes--you know we had the crafts one night a week and the other night a week--. We had two classes a week. One night we studied academic subjects and they included reading in Creek. And I knew enough about the reading in Creek so that when the regular Creek teacher was not there then I could go on with the lesson you know and have them read in Creek. But I can't translate. I can read, I wouldn't say I can read real well. But I read well enough where as if I read something to Jimmy he can translate it. Because he understand and can't read. But if he had something written in Creek and he wants to know what it is then I can read it to him and he can understand what it is. And we were talking about community work. I have been a member of a home demonstration club for homemakers, Extension Homemakers group, for a good many years. And I've been officer--served as officer in our local groups for a good many years. And right now we have organized--well, I wouldn't say organized really but we have a group and this Indian extension worker comes out. She's not an Indian. But she works among the Indian women in five counties. And she comes to our meetings every month. And she's really doing a good job, you know, among the Indian women.

(Do they come out?)

Well, not to, well. We have six, oh, maybe six or eight women. Sometimes we just have three or four there. But I guess we have about eight who come from time to time. I try not to miss a meeting but sometimes it's almost impossible for me to stay, you know, during the whole meeting because we start our meeting about ten- o'clock in the morning and then we eat lunch. And
