

(Yeah, first time.)

That's when my dad was living, then.

(Yeah.)

We used to live across the river, you know.

(Ah-hum.)

He had a brother west of Okmulgee! About 20 miles. When my mother died, then he said his brother write and wanted him up there with them. Then we moved up there with them. In them days, them shoes was as high as this bench.

(Well!)

Then kinda work shoe, you know, and had glass over the toe here.

(Yeah)

Yeah, them was first pair of shoes I wore, didn't wear shoes in them days.

(They last a long time, too. With all that glass and iron on them.)

Father died up there. There was five children.

(Yeah.)

Everyone died out but me.

(You're the only one left.)

Some lived in Okmulgee, some of them, my sister lived over here in Seminole.

(Yeah.)

I ain't got no brother and no sister.

INDIAN MEDICINE

(Yeah, Is all the Indian medicine plant gone, now. Or are there still some left?)

There just might be I could never find any.

(Yeah, this one Indian was asking me to find him some redroot.)
