

Especially when we're grouped together, there's always a prayer offered, in thanksgiving for whatever they have.

(You remember we were talking about that pole that was in the ground, and I was wondering how they got that pole to stand up since it was 30 or 40 feet high?)

Well, it was dug. There was a hole that they sit it in.

(But how would they dig the hole? Would they use any special things to do it with?)

No. If they had a post hole digger, I imagine that is what they used.

(What about the fire? Did they have one fire?)

No, there was no fire at this Ghost Dance.

(Oh, I thought you said they had flint around it. Well what dance was it that they had the flint around it? Do you remember?)

Well, that was during the hand games that I was telling you about.

(Oh yeah, well did the Caddo ever have a fire for the Ghost Dance?)

No, there was never a fire.

(Well did you say they danced it at night?)

Yes, that's what I was telling you. I read the caption from the book.

(Is there any light then when people were dancing?)

Yes, they generally picked out a moonlight night when the full moon most generally. Of course, in those days when they didn't have any electricity, they had these lanterns you know, whatever could be brought.

(Were there any other people besides the Moonhead and your father and your grandfather that were able to find these things that people lost while the Ghost Dance was going on?)

Well, they didn't uh, do that. It's always done privately. They'd get these. You'd go one of these men and they'd tell you just where it is. You couldn't hide anything from them. From those guys I know that myself.

(Did they ever do this while the ghost dance was going on?)
