

No.

(Near Oktaha.)

No. I didn't.

(Well, did you ever hear your mother or your grandma tell about the civil war they had way back in those days?)

Uh-hum. My grandmother did.

(Could you tell about that?)

Well they said they started a war and then my half-brother on my daddy's side was little. And they had to put a dress on--he was about eight or ten years old--and they had to put a dress on him. Put it in the wagon. And when they was fighting that boy was in the wagon with a dress on. And then they said they moved from where they was at.

LOCATION OF FAMILY HOME

They were close to the Verdigris , I think. They moved from there. Then they camped somewheres until the war was over. And they all moved down here. My daddy, well it really was just half a mile from here. Not quite half a mile. And they lived--they made a house out there. They lived there till my daddy got married to my mother. And my mother was married back this away and when her husband died she come back to her daddy. They got married. He built a house up here on the hill. And that's where they lived. And my grandma lived down there with my half-sisters.

(You're pointing out towards west. Then your step-daughter lived back towards--)

Not my --

(South.)

My grandma lived just about half a mile from here. Close to the river bank. And now it's a mile up here too where my mother lived. And that's where we all was born. Raised right there close together.
