

There was only print, and he claims the print was only, what he had found, what the Cherokees wear. And in footwear in he found it in England, somewheres.

(Hum)

Surely, there must be some trace.

(Must be somewheres.)

And if map could find the original. The original Cherokee alphabets.

(Yeah, I wonder what became of that.)

Those things, now they claim the Smithsonian has keep, has a lot of things.

(Ah-huh)

And no-one knows where he's buried.

(No.)

Some claims he left this part of the country. And he went towards Mexico.

Course that is hear say.

(Yeah, that is why I want you to talk to Phillip Osage, about. Cause he says he had a letter from a Cherokee, in California, that had been down there, in Old Mexico. And found something that no-one knows about, regarding to Sequoyah. And when you get a chance and you could to talk to him, and he'll probably tell you. And he hasn't told me, cause I haven't been back. But I would be very glad, if you could learn this for your own information. Cause it may give you some, more light on the life of Sequoyah. And it would be very interesting, I know what he has to tell. But he says he has a letter or letters, and would be expecting another letter from this Indian, regarding Sequoyah. And apparently this man living in California travels alot. And is interested in history.)

Even if I could just get, even just a, small, just even a, well some information about information it would require a tremendous amount of research.
