

(Yeah, air holes.)

Yeah, air holes, yeah. And then, and then, well, the way he told it, they fixed the high bank, you know, oh, high. They always fixed stairways, you know, in the earth. Cut the earth in some way, fix the stairways coming down, you know. And that's the way he came down them stairways without making any trouble and he went across the Missouri River and how he missed them holes, nobody knows. But when he got across, he bumped into a tree. He woke up. He heard dogs barking out there, but they were way across the Missouri River. (Laughter) And "Hey, hey," he says, "I don't know how I'm going get by." Now, when he's, when he's himself, well, he's afraid to go across (Laughter) Anybody would, you know, the way them air holes were so close together. And how in the world he got across there, anyway, he sat down. It wasn't long before he went to sleep again. And they say that somebody diced him. Now, they claim some little folks. I don't know. That's the part I don't know. Maybe, that's the way. But, anyway, when he's sleeping, he came back, cross the Missouri River, going up them steps, you know. Last step, you know, he stumbled over and woke up and the people were right there looking for him. (Laughter) Now, that's the truth. That's the same man telling about these sacred medicines, you know, and that's the same man that cross the Missouri River, the one that's full of air holes, you know. (Laughter) Yeah, that's the truth. That's the way he was. He never did, done anything wrong or doesn't get burned or hurt anybody. He's just that way.

(Seems like they did kinda, something is guiding him like that, I guess.)

Yeah, yeah, that's what they claimed. There's someone guiding him. Yeah,