

they got, had a good team them years because, see, this, we had two teams there at that school, regular teams, and we had a team from the what they called small boys' quarters. Course, they weren't small boys, but, you know, they just called it that. That's how, that's younger boys, you know. At the other place, there's bigger boys, older boys, see, and became a part that way. And this younger boys, they had a team, basketball team too. They started at dairy barn. And they stayed together when they were young, you know, from that age, they played and they got to be the school team later years. That's how come they had a good team. Same way with the baseball.

(They had some pretty good athletics, I imagine, up there.)

Yeah, uh-huh, but I guess, you know, about a Cheyenne boys, trying to remember his name, Keyes. I believe his name's Keyes. Anyway, he turned out to be a great athletic. Some of these boys, you know, that went away from that school were in a ball team. They got to be Texas Leaders, name John them days. I don't know whether they still have that or not. They used to have a team called "Texas Leaders" and they joined that club.

And you know Mose Yellow Horse?

(Mmm-hmm)

Well, he's gone now. He got his start there at Chilocco. You know, he played with Pittsburg when he went out. And several played and for the other leagues, minor leagues, and league of leagues, right there where we went to school.
