

(When you leave that Chilocco, what did you do then? When you finished Chilocco?)

When I left Chilocco, well, I stayed home with my folks, my father here. And then I was going to work in a print shop, but my eyes got to bothering me, you know. Some of my folks, you know how the Indians are, you know, and at the same time, they didn't want me to work. They think it's something awful for me to work. (Laughter) Yeah. Says, "We got land. We got money. We got a home even (not clear)" (Laughter) (Sentence not clear) Yeah, you know, they didn't want me to work, you know. They thought that's the most pitiful thing for Indians to do. That's what they thought, you know, but it's different with us you know. And after we learned, you know, we grew up. Well, that's why I'd rather have my children working you know. But it was different them days, you know. And, of course, I got love, you know, for their children. That's what it does, you know. But, of course, it's love, but still they made a little mistake there in those days. Well, that's really, why, they just send us to work, you know, but still, it wasn't that way with them, you know. They love, you know, why, to see me out there sweating and all that. Well, they think it's awful thing for me to go through, see? (Laughter) So, they didn't allow me to work them days, you know. So...

SCHOOL SOCIALS

(When you were at Chilocco, did the boys and girls, they kinda eat together or what did they kinda, did they do they have dances or what did you do at Chilocco?)

Yeah, we have a social.

(Yeah, that's what I mean.)
