

Yes. You go down there ask any of 'em. I say I always try to find out-- say, "You Mexican", and they say "No." And say what are you then, Spanish. "No. I'm Indian." They tell you that sometime another tribe down there, Montezuma,

(Aztec.)

And Yaqui down there.

(Yaqui, Aztec and--)

Aztec mostly.

(But they have a lot of Indians in Mexico, too. There is one tribe I believe it's Kickapoo. They moved down there.)

Yeah. Part of 'em. Inca Park.

(Yeah, part of 'em are still here in Oklahoma and part of them are still over there though. I guess the ones that didn't want to go stayed, and the ones that went over there--but they say they come, you know, once a year they together.)

Yeah, oh, I guess it's all right that way.

(Yeah.)

Guess they get along alright with the Mexicans.

(Uh-huh. They got used to it down there I guess.)

Lots of Indians down there. Juarez Indians they had a show, had a (not clear)

They didn't have no other. Just had show on, that's all.

(Those Aztec, they got a dance, but ain't got no music.)

They have.

(Just a drum, and no music, no song. I don't know why they don't sing. I guess they don't lost their song.)

I guess so.

(But you know like we are--you know there's Otis. Did the Osages--when they had their ceremonies, like you said, you know them songs, we had our own singers didn't we?)
