

I forgot Abe.

(Abe--Abraham.)

Abraham.

(Yeah, Abe White.)

That's the young one, ain't it?

(I don't know if younger. He had a brother name Joe Henny.)

Two of them, two of them boys.

(Yeah, he's kinda paralyzed.)

Drink too much.

(Oh, that. And he's got diabetes, you know. Yeah, that's how come. I just wondered what kind of relationship was there.)

Old Man Minkie's wife, she had two children, too. Roy James and R.J., used to call him.

(Oh!)

I don't know who the father was. But they were related to Simon.

(Oh-h!)

We are not finished?

(Not yet. About to rain outside.)

Yeah, come from that way.

(Yeah.)

Have lots of rain.

(Quite a bit. Next time I come out here I'm gonna write on a paper what I want to find out. And I'm gonna let you read it first and you can study and think it over, then we talk.)

(The rest of this interview is irrelevant--talking about weather, etc. and why Mr. Russell's speech is hard to understand.)

(End of interview.)
