The way he interpreted it was scattering.

(Ah-huh)

Course his people pull away from the, from this town, see. And made their own town, the call it Broken Arrow.

(Ah-hum)

That's these Indians say they call them, it Broken Arrow, because they scattered away from the main body.

(Yeah)

That's his interpretation, there. The white people says, there was a mine down there. You turn left.

(Oh, we go left.)

Oh, that's alright, now we let this guy pass. We let these two guy pass, and turn left.

COWETA

(Now Coweta, that was the name of an old Indian Town, down in Alabama, wasn't it?)

Yeah, that was the first, that was the strongest town there, was.

(Ah-hum)

It was made up of several little towns that they whip, see.

(Ah-hum)

And that's my town, there.

(Is there a translation for the word Coweta?)

No, it's just Coweta.

(It's just town.)

That's the town.

(Hum)

That is, that much we have found out so far, Coweta.
