

Broken Arrow Indian Church.

(Is that right on there, up there.)

Right here on top.

(Ah-huh)

They built a new church there, now.

(Yeah!)

Nothing like it use to be.

(Interruption.)

(The Indians should be proud of their new church, here then.)

Right, right here. We had a wild onion dinner here, last Saturday.

(I sure do enjoy those thing most, we have them over in our country, in there.)

We have to go two miles, down this way.

(All right.)

CONTINUES ABOUT CEMETERIES

Taking you by that Berryhill Cemetery.

(I want to find that Berryhill Cemetery, if it's all probably or what remains. It's just this side of Coweta, isn't it?)

Yes! Across the Cedar Creek. If you come by, I'll go with you. We can find it together.

(Yeah, I wanna find every one of these old ones, if we can.)

(Sentence not clear.) That wassmy last, what I was looking at too.

(Well, I'm just going to plain too enthusiastically but, I went through many different libraries, hunting for something, or someone else has done on recording and preserving old cemetery in book form. And even in the Universities, they don't have a thing. So it's a one man project that I'm working on, and more or less that I'm retired I'm gonna continue working at it. And get every Indian cemetery that I can find and record
