

Rent him a room or anything.

(What kind of different tribes were there at Wyandotte, when you were going there?)

Well, there was Senecas, Well, I believe there was Senecas and Wyandottes and Cherokees and Creeks and I think that was all. Oh, we had one Osage and Quapaws. (sentence not clear) Oh! When I first went to school, I can still remember I was five years old. I tried to go to school. I guess I might have made myself sick or something but I had to beg to let me go and later on, I'm thankful now they let me go with the rest of them. We didn't have anything but coal oil. And one evening, kerosene, they just call it coal oil.

(Coal oil.)

We had to fill coal oil lamps at nights.

(Yeah!)

And set them out. That was my duty to fill coal oil. But in the winter time, we had to carry out coal. One bucket every evening after four o'clock but you know we'd get up there on the pile of coal. Oh, gosh! Lots of time we wait for the employees. Them employees were strict in them days. So we were afraid of them. We really toled the line. We used to visit a lot when we go to that coal house just pitting on top of that coal (not clear) big stove and that was only one that we had, that kept the whole building warm. I guess it kept it warm. We never complained of it being cold.

(Well, must of kept it.)

And the one up stairs it was one big pot belly, you know, you seem them box cars?

(Yeah.)
