BIRDIE'S FINANCIAL SITUATION AND PLANS FOR HER HOUSE

Jordan: Birdie, if you get to stay here--if you get your water fixed--do you have any more plans for fixing this house?

Birdie: Well, I'll tell you. I was just going to say something about her boy's house--Muggs. You go to the back of this house, this house just kinda sway like this. From the wind, you know--north wind blowing--

Irene: Would you rather build another new home?

Birdie: I don't know.. If I could afford to pay for it--if my husband gets rich selling his silver. He says, "When I go to church and they read the scripture, 'silver and gold have I none.' I feel guilty because I got silver!"

Irene: All these people are gonna have to have more ear holes. My dad had five ear holes like that.

Birdie: Grandpa had three on each side here:

Irene: He had five like that. He had them way up here like that (indicating top margin of ear). Just like cannibals. But maybe that's the way the Indians used to do. We have to have these Indian women to make a lot of holes in their ears.

Birdie: Make my friends pierce their ears!

Irene: Sell a lot of earrings!

Birdie: That's the way he makes his living, you know--with silver now. And I don't know--if I could ever afford it I wouldn't mind, but it's just kinda beyond my dreams. To have another home--build a home. I mean out here. I don't even want to think about it!

Irene: Coming this way--ours is coming this way.

Birdie: When the wind gets up here, boy, you just go for the cellar. That's just kinda in like that. But we just kinda make the best of it here,
