

No. But she was different. Now Dave was the boss when his first wife was living. But now she bossed things after she married him. And he just done whatever she said.

(There must have been a lot of folks lived in that country a long time ago. A lot people have told me. A lot--and all of 'em were Indians too.)

Yes, most of 'em

(Most of 'em.)

I've got--You know Henry Swaggey at Jay?

(Uh-huh)

He's my mother's half-brother. And then I've got a cousin, Roy Jones, that lives in Oklahoma City. And he was my mother's sister's boy and he's the only one living in that family now. And he fell of--(Sentence not clear)

(Young girl, young lady growing up.)

LAND CHANGES--OPEN RANGE.

(Was all this Peters Prairie, Butler Prairie country farming land?)

No. No, that's just in timber out there.

(It was just all in timber.)

Lot of that wasn't--there's a house now down the side a Peters Prairie there--then it was just all timber land.

(They just let their livestock have open range.)

Run out.

(Run out. Well, some of that country did look like--I mean might have been farming down in the bottom. I just wondered if they did farm quite a bit.)

Well that land--now let's see there was some--some of the Coopers lived on some--part of that place that Jimmy had down there.

(Words not clear)

I never did see him. His name was John Snell.

(That's you mother's dad.)

Yes.
