

creek. It's gone. Been gone for some time. And then there's a Shiloh graveyard over there.

(Well.)

You wouldn't think about it being there if you wasn't looking for it.

(Yes ma'm.)

It's growing up so bad. No one--no relatives of any kind here to see after it.

(How about the old churches. Did you have old churches around here?)

Well, we did. We used to have church up here at the school. And then on over yonder about three miles. What you call the Watts settlement.

(Yeah.)

The Watts school. They had a church over there. A Holiness.

(Yes ma'm. Well, let's see, Outside of your family, who were some of the early settlers here in this part of the county?)

Oh, well, us Usserys, Harrisons, Paytons. All right? I can't remember just--

(Was there a Horn family too?)

Oh yes. Horns used to live up there close to the school.

(Yes ma'm.)

But they're all gone now.

RECALLS NAMES OF HER SCHOOL TEACHERS

(Well. That's the way it is a lot of places. All the older families are gone now.)

And all those that are living are gone too. I mean someplace else.

(Yes ma'm.)

I mean they've left here.

(Gone to town or somewhere.)

Yeah.
