

happened, but his horses run away. Down through here they come. I was hanging on to 'em and I run out there trying to head 'em. They paid me no mind and went on running down hill. Headed 'em into a garden fence.

(Well.)

Caught 'em.

RECALLS EARLY DAYS WITH PLEASURE

(Well, I guess lot of things have happened that we can look back on now and think they're either funny or real sad.)

Well, I'll tell you. I think back and look back and I just wonder.

Wonder how in the world we ever made it through. Not scared as we'd be now.

(I think about those things too. Things are so different now when--)

Well, yes.

(I lived in the day before automobiles. I mean I was born before automobiles came into general use. Everything was horse and buggy, and wagon then and saddle horse.)

I can remember the first car I ever rode in.

(Well, I bet that was an experience wasn't it?)

Well, I was so worried I didn't pay much attention to it.

(I guess the biggest scare for most people was riding on a train.

That's what the older ones tell me. And they remember every detail about riding on a train.)

We kids had to ride the train from here to Quapaw. And I don't know, I guess, I never thought much about it.

LIFE IN ORPHAN'S HOME AT PARK HILL

(See, you went to that orphan school out there by Park Hill, did you?)
