

now last year she went to Brigham City, Uta, Carson City, Nevada and New York City. And the year before that she went to Arizona and taught all summer there.

(Well does she find Indians who don't know their culture?)

Yes. Quite a few. And they are beginning to--seem like the white people I guess are interested in bringing back the Indian culture than what they were ever before. And there's more people interested in now why the Indians are letting their ways--I might say ways, get away from them. Just like we are here. Our language is also getting away.

(I understand that you are studying the language now.)

Yes. I used to talk and 'course understand it, but I haven't heard it for so long that to really know it--I've just about forgotten.

(You think it will come back to you?)

Yes it will, I think. At least I hope so.

(Well, thank you.)

(End of interview.)
