

eat. And finally why grandma Harrison, she really was just scared to death and she said, "Go, somebody go out a little ways and sprinkle that all around, you know; just throw it out there," all that food--big kettles of stuff, you know, food. And corn, you know, and beef and fry bread and oh, I don't know what else they had. So they took and they threw that out toward that fire, you know. And so they all loaded in, but still they heard that hissing noise again, you know. So they came on home you know, until they got home--I guess at daylight, you know at their homes.

(Well, did they think that was Moonhead, or--?)

Well, they kinda suspicioned that it was Moonhead. (laughs)

(End of Interview.)
