

Redcherries. The sister making introduction. The family here, of Gertrude Gould, deceased--when they come here the thoughts and words that have been said by here come to their minds--their heart--the family. Just can't help-sorrow no doubt, hits them. Lot of us have went through the same situation but always go back to the Creator's words--the Giver--the Taker. So called as the control with the breath of life. What you breathe, it's alone. You take it-to exist in this world like He wanted you to---but there's just one way that you might see a life to the full of extent for each individual--is the words of the Creator. Amanda Jenkins, you're asked to come and shake hands in honor of the deceased, Gertrude Gould. Amamda Jenkins from Wyoming. Mrs. Martin Armor, you're also asked to come and shake hands. Joe Neely, you're asked to come and shake hands. Joe Neely, the pow-wow bouncer--get over here! Shake hands. Lloyd Jenkins, you're also asked to come and shake hands. Doris Walters, from Seiling--Charlie Waters' wife. (called) Jewell White Plume, Junior, the grandson of Gertrud Gould passed away two weeks before Gertrude did, and the daughter, here, giving a recognition of the boy--Marcel Sankey.

(Afternoon program continued about two more hours. Most notable event after the above was special given by Olive Sankey, outgoing Secretary, honoring three white visitors and their families. These white men were in the same Marine outfit with Warren Sankey in World War II, a Marine outfit which was involved in important battles in the South Pacific. Warren has retained contacts with many of his service buddies and occasionally attends the annual reunions of the regiment (or Battalion). Last winter at a reunion in San Diego he asked several of his friends to come to the Barefoot Pow-wow as his guest. These three and their wives came. Two live in Houston, Texas and one in Omaha, Nebraska. All are now wealthy and prominent. In this special Olive gave presents of Pendleton blankets to the men and their wives. They had a special War Dance song sung and all danced, even the white visitors. Later these three veterans were honored by being asked to take down the flag at conclusion of afternoon program. They were given more presents and recognition. They were visibly moved by this attention.)
