

and it'll be more, it'll be less responsibility of going through alot of different kinds of trouble like a lot of these young teenage boys. They get out and get drunk and in our days that was something hard to see. You don't see very many Indians that are in jails or getting drunk. You don't hardly see that. But to this day even these young teenagers get up and get drunk. For instance, these young girls, some are 16, and some 19, and maybe 16 on down, before you know it, well they'll have a baby. And they are not watched like we was in the back. And that's the reason I say these days are too fast of living. Course we may be slow and we may five or six years behind but we was taught better than to this days.

(Do you remember anything about the allotment period?)

ALLOTMENTS:

No I don't. They gave so many allotments to each family and that's about all I know. I don't know the rest of the allotment and how they issued out and all that. Just like me all my folks had lands around here at Long Horn Mountain and I'm the only one that had my place way out southwest of Hobart, southeast of Long Horn.

(Was this land allotted to you?)

Yes, it was allotted to me. And I sold that place and I turned around and bought me eighty acres over here east of 'Pache. So that part, see, I don't know about that part but that was done I guess, before I ever was born. Because the last time that they gave out land I was among one of 'em. That's how come my place was picked out way out away from my parents. See, it was way out southwest of Hobart and all my brothers and sisters got places around my mother and father. Just joins and combine theirs, see?

END OF TAPE.
