

(But if you're just calling your younger sister would you ever say te' y w?)

No, just cett w h w' ei I don't know why it's that way, but that's the way. I'm not just putting it in there.

(But if there's two women married to one man and they're not sisters, and one wife had some reason to be talking to the other, how would she call her?)

naeni.s

(Does that have a meaning?)

Well, naenis means they're together to one man.

(Would it make any difference if these two women--if one is older than the other?)

It doesn't make any difference. Well, they would-- See, the youngest one, when she talked to her maid she'd say n é bih w. And this other one, if she's going to talk to that younger one and tell her what to do, she'd have to say cett w h w' ei, that way.

(Even if they're not sisters?)

Even if they're not sisters.

(When would they use this n é nis?)

n é nis -- well, you know, when they talk about the other one and somebody says, "Who?" They say n é nis.

(What if one wife was talking and there were maybe three wives or four wives and she wanted to talk about all of her husband's other wives--what would she say?)

Well, she would say naenisi

(Would you say that one again?)

naenisi

(This word, b é t é bi -- does that have a meaning?)
