

(Kind of a military.)

Yes, it was.

(Did you wear a--I mean a uniform?)

We wore uniforms, our Sunday uniforms.

(What did they look like?)

Oh, they were blue serge, rough and scratchy. (Laughter)

(Quite different than--)

I think so.

(Did you have any language difficulty when you went to school?)

Well, I didn't have it so bad as my sisters and brothers--sisters and brothers did because we all talked Indian when we were home. And, of course they went to school ahead of me, and of course I learned from them.

(Oh, you learned English from them.)

I learned from them.

(I believe Laura told me she took an interpreter with her--is that true?)

Well, I don't know. She could have.

(She was afraid she would get spanked.)

Well, I think it was Rosie Logan--

(Went with her?)

Uh-huh, it was Clara's mother.

(Clara White Tree?)

Uh-huh, her mother.

(Well, I understand that when they--they went to the table or to get their food, how was that they lined up and put their feet against the board or to stand in a straight row. What was that about eating?)

We didn't do that.

(You didn't do that? Somebody told me that. I think Raymond Dawson must have told me that.)
