

Well, they treat them the same way.

(When a boy is talking to his older brother, what would he call his older brother?)

néisw hō'w

(That's if he's telling his older brother something?)

Yeah.

(Would he ever just call his older brother by his name?)

I don't think so.

(But if a boy wants to get his older brother's attention, how would he do it--?)

Well, he'd say "néisw hō'w"

(And then if a boy is trying to attract the attention of his younger brother--how would he call to him?)

I think he would have to call him by his name.

(How is a father supposed to act towards his sons? And how does a son treat his father? Do they ever tease or joke?)

No. They don't tease. They don't tease their sons or their fathers.

(Are they around each other very much--a father and his sons?)

Not much. They don't hang around together. Just only at nights, I guess.

(I was just wondering if a father would ever take his boys hunting or anything?)

Oh yeah. They take them hunting or go fishing. Go after wood with them.

(Do they talk to them very much?)

Yeah.

(What is a son supposed to do if he's trying to show he respects his father and thinks a lot of him--how does a son show this?)

Well, I don't know how he would show him, but his father would know, if he minds his father, and does what his father tells him--well, that's the kind of respect they gave to them.

(Would a father ever joke with his boys sort of like you do with your kids and with Alta?)

Yeah, they joke with them or scare them, or something like that.

(If they were going to scare them, how would they do that?)

Oh, just sneak up and scare them.
