

Jess: This M.C., Clinton Youngbear, he looks around, first. If his mother-in-law is not around then he starts talking about her, you know. But if she's around he don't say nothing about her.

Clinton: Bertha Little Coyote is making introduction in honor of Roy Nightwalker who served in Second World War. He won the Silver Star. At this time she's calling Cheyenne-Arapaho Gourd Dancers to acknowledge pledge of $10.00 towards their next year's pow-wow.

Jess: He (Clinton) said one time, "I actually don't know what kind of looking woman my mother-in-law is--cause as long as I'm around she's got that drawn-up look on her forehead there and make a big face. I never did see her natural features. I'd like to catch her some time when she's not watching and see what kind of looking woman she is." He didn't know she was in here. She said "Tell my son-in-law to look--I'm in here." He hushed right now. (Do they usually joke about their mothers-in-law?) Yeah, yeah. (What about their brothers-in-law?) Well, the brothers-in-law joke more than--and sisters-in-law joke with their brother-in-law. But brothers-in-law can go beyond any reasonable--they call each other crazy, and dead (?) and no-good and eaters, and all that.

Clinton: At this time a gentleman that we all respect and love and take as one of the Cheyenne-Arapahoes as a member of our tribe. He's been around us and among us and almost seems he is one of us. And I'm sure in his heart the feeling is mutual. He's saying one and all you people remember him in your prayers and through your cards you have sent to him at the time of his illness. And I believe he feels that through your prayers--your prayers were answered and he is able to enjoy better health. At this time he's calling C & A Gourd Dancers to come and acknowledge a gift in token of appreciation for the Cheyenne-Arapaho people for their love and affection
