

asking the family of Archie Walker to make preparation for their special.

Jess: My grandson came after my fan and my feathers. He wanted to use them to dance. I make them, keep them, let them know how to use them. They can have them. I'll make some more. (Pause) There's four Hamilton brothers--Walter, Frank, David, and Albert.

(Gourd dancing. During about the third or fourth song, among other giveaways, Mary Haag comes out and puts a beaded necklace down in front of a little girl dancing and has Bertha Little Coyote come over and pick it up.)

Clinton: I just wonder what's wrong with Albert Pawnee. He's (unintelligible phrase.) When you get married, things are different.

(Brother-in-law dig, probably) O.K. Next on the program, Alfritch, a special has been requested honoring Archie Walker, veteran of World War I and World War II. Archie--you request a war dance or a gourd dance?

(Singers begin a war dance song.) Slow, stately, woman makes two high-pitched sobbing cries, not exactly a lulu. Call for Roy Nightwalker.

He comes to speaker's podium. Talks with a lady who Jess thinks is Archie's aunt. Roy began to chant and speak in Cheyenne. This is Cheyenne style giveaway announcement. Jess says old folks like this style of announcement. Roy ends his chant by calling name of Frank Wilson.

Clinton: Inez Kauley making introduction in honor of her uncle. At this time she's calling on the C & A Gourd Dancers to come forward and acknowledge a pledge of $10.00 towards your next year's pow-wow. She will have the bookkeeper make out a check as soon as she gets home. (Her husband.)

Roy Nightwalker: Pauline Little Hand, here, is making introduction of her brother, a veteran of World War I, and is asking Cynthia Osage to come up here and shake his hand--Cynthia Osage from Hammon.
