

money--oil lease man. (A man named Little Head from Montana acknowledges a gift from Roy.)

Roy: Calling myself.

Clinton: Where's Harvey? Bill, there's his wife there--you can have her put her big toe print on there and give her the money! (everyone laughs.)

Jess: He'll be talking about his mother-in-law--I don't think she's in here.

Clinton: O.K. drummers, let's have some Round Dance while we're making preparation for the next special. Everybody round dance. Round dance--just for you, Alta. You used to be the first one up and then you got married--(Joking) with someone present--maybe a sister-in-law.)

(Round dancing. About four or five songs.)

Clinton: Anybody got any aspirin? Aspirin's all we need--nothing else. We need two boxes of aspirins--one for Roger and one for Gunsmoke (Fanman)! Both feeling mighty low. O. K. drummers, next on the program a special has been requested in memory of Clyde Standing Bull, a brother of Mrs. Charlie Curtis. (Pause) Hate to see you leave, Alta, but we understand --when you first get married, you know, bedtime comes pretty early! (Again this is a joke directed against some woman present--maybe a sister-in-law. Everyone laughs at this.) Alta used to be the last one to leave at any dance! Good night, Alta!

(Song begins)

Clinton: This song is being sung in memory of Clyde Standing Bull.

(Song sung without drum. Slow song.)

Jess: This is a Raider's Song. Like when they raid an enemy camp or meet with traditional enemy-warriors--surprise them, or something like that.
