

Well, like he said, Indians can't put away their money. Why, they always lose, they save it. Money has no home. That's always the problem when you ask them.

(Money has no home?)

Uh-huh--money has no home.

(How, why do we do so much about Indian time and White Man's time" What do they mean by that?)

Oh, Indians always slow about everything. That's what they mean. When you specify certain time for dinner or meal or something, why Indians always an hour late.

(What is the background of Indian People that . . . .)

I don't know what it is, but they just got to using that phrase, Indian Time, 'cause Indians always late, never on time.

(There must be something in the Indian's background in his old ways that causes that?)

They used to tell time by the shade, sun, the shadow.

(Maybe, that's part of it. They never had clocks one time. They used a different method of telling time, didn't they?)

Um-hum.

(Ed, what you think about the Indian's concept of time? What's the difference from the White Man?)

Well, they're just a little bit slow on the time. They just don't care about the time. Times goes right on regardless of you, the way I look at it. They don't care if they get there on time or not.

(Time's always there and always will be, won't it?)

That's the way I see it. A lot of them have wrist watch, but they don't live by that time.

STRAW DICE GAME AND OTHER GAMES

(You were telling me about straw dice. I've seen it, but how do they play it?)

Oh, let's see, there's eight of them, is there eight or seven, eight of them round disks and then a turtle, and maybe sometimes horse head. If you flip that bowl, and if the horse head stands up.

(You put these eight things in a bowl. You flip the bowl?)

Ah-huh, eight things and two horse heads or two turtles.
