

I think he closed it 192--And then he--we used to live there, in a house when I was very young girl. My folks--this my old man (husband) he was married my older sister. He used to farm. He used to raise corn and caffy corn.

(What kind of corn?)

Caffy corn.

(I don't think I've heard of that.)

Up north you don't know that caffy corn? The woman that come from east, the one I told you, we was feeding horses, we had that caffy corn. We used to take it like that and put it in the wagon and she come over there and look at them. "What is that, corn?" "Caffy corn. Good to feed horses and cattle." She said, "First time I seen--heard about this caffy corn." It don't grow up there.

(Is it caffy--)

Little old things like--bushy like. They grow about--(2 ft.)

(How do you say that? Caffy corn?)

Caffy corn.

(I never heard of that before either. Did they grow that especially to feed the cattle?)

Yeah. It still grows around here.

(Did they plant it or just go out and get it?)

They plant it. They plant corn, they plant caffy corn.

(What other kind of things did they plant?)

Wheat--most of them raise wheat. Let's see, corn and caffy corn to feed cattle--and then we moved close to Fay, that's a little town.

About gone now--just that one store. We move over there--just my old
