

girls's name is Eva Taft now. From Anadarko. The other girl was Zola. Z-O-L-A. She goes by Ahtone--Zola Ahtone. On the office roll. Eva didn't have any children but Zola did have two boys, I think. I just gave nicknames to Zola's boys. The oldest one--I call him "Boogerhead" because he's a great big clumsy fat boy. The other one I can't call him-- I can't remember what his name is. I think he was married to one of Goombi's daughters--Francis Goombi's daughter.

(What's their father's name?)

I don't know if Zola was married. I think she was, but she married to a white man and I don't know his name. She was married to him. I did know it but I can't call it just now. She still goes by that name--(unintelligible phrase)

(Is the white man the father of this Boogerhead and this other one?)

Yes. I don't know if they were ever legally married or not, but they lived together.

(Now the father of Zola and Eva, is he Indian?)

Yes, I think so. Wetselline, I think--Henry Wetselline. Apache (Kiowa-Apache).

(Did James Ahtone and his wife have any other children besides--)

There's just two. No--that was by his first wife. He got married again after his wife died. He married a white woman. I don't know her name. But he had three children, I think, from her.

(What are their names?)

The oldest one is Toots Ahtone. A boy. The next one is Campbell Ahtone, another Ahtone. He had a daughter, too, but I don't know the daughter's name. They live just two miles from the Apache "Y" up here, by Hog Creek. Them girls. They all live together right there. They got houses together by the highway. (West of Hog Creek, west of Anadarko on Highway 9). From that "Y" up there west of Hog Creek you go about two miles south, and it's the first road
