SIDE B

--I would never tell anything about this. But you, you been good to me. You got a lot of respect for me. That's why I told you everything.

(I'd like to ask you, now--you don't want just anybody to hear this?)

No.

(I'm going to fix it where not just anybody can come in and listen to it.)

Yeah. Because this man told me, he said, it wasn't a plaything--for me to just spread it out. But as I told you, I just tell it to you so you'll know.

(I appreciate it--)

And I hope that your family and yourself will have good luck all the time.

(Thank you. Maybe some day you can paint me.)

Yeah.

USE OF SAGE

(Well, were there some other sickness you were going to tell me about, too?)

Well, you know, when they have stomach troubles, they used to--you know these green sage you always see out in there--just out in the open. It's green sage.

It's different one. You know that other one is kinda gray, but this is green.

And, you know, up this way there's leaves around here and just like there's little bunch of something over there. They used to pick that. And it was bitter.

And when they have stomach trouble they used to put it in their mouth and let them chew it and swallow it--that juice--and that just checked the bowels.

(Would they use it while it was still fresh?)

Yeah. Even--well, they used to have some--used to save some, you know. They used to dry it. And just with their hands they used to go that way (rubbing them together) and just like pepper or something like that. Just real soft..
