

(Probably, part of Cooweescoowee.)

I think, I think it was.

(Cause it was a--)

Cause it was a big area, and I believe so. But I'm not positive right at this minute.

(Did you ever hear your folks say anything about the, what was that Cherokee outlaw, that Henry?)

Henry Starr

(Ah-huh)

Yes, my mother knew him real well, you know. And--

(He was over, he used to live over by Vinita.)

Ah-hum. She went to school with his wife. And Olive it's a Seminary, you know.

(You have a lot of interesting stories?)

Yes, I think so too. Well, my sister is such a pretty girl. And, Henry Starr one time, Mommy said introduce Bes to Henry Starr. And he said "Well, Magg, this is such a pretty girl you had better marry her off to a rich man." And I remember seeing this picture that we made, the debter to the law, you know. And that was an ironical thing, because not to long until he lasp back into his old--

(Yeah, that's to bad.)

Way. And it was and just to bad because he was very likeable person, my sister said. Ah-huh, my parents knew him just real well.

(Piano music and singing)

DISCUSSES RECORDS

(Did you write this? You wrote this lyrics? This poem of music written by Maggie Fry.)

They played that record, at the opening of the museum. Opening of the Will Rogers Museum. And Will Rogers's grave, too.

(Ah-huh. Do you have any more that you wrote?)

Not on a record, no. I don't. That's the only record that I have made. And on the other side my brother did.

("I said is it Indian.")

Ah-huh. "Old Apache."

(This is done by whom, what's his name?)
