

and threw it over there. And he was pretty wise and stay away from there. And when Spider Woman came home, she said, "Oh, it's a boy--he's used the arrows and shoot the ball. I know it now." And she said, "I'll not go to work today. I'll try and catch him." So she hid behind the door, back in the corner. And the boy he came back to the cabin where she lived. And when he come up to the cabin--he possessed a divine spirit or power--and through her spiritual impulse, he knew that the Old Lady was inside, hiding. So he stood at the entrance and said, (Kiowa phrase)--"You're hiding there! I see you hiding there! I see you hiding!" And after a while she found out she was--and when she got up, the boy ran away. And she chased him till she caught him. Catch the boy? And the boy cried and cried and cried. And she done like the old Indians do--she put the child on her back with a blanket and carried it out and sing a lullaby. And the lullaby song, she used the words (Sings short song in Kiowa)--that's the words she sang. And the little child said, "Oh, you're talking and singing against my mama! You're talking about my mama!" Oh, she rocked and rocked him. Finally quieted him back. And she captured him and she kept him. And he played, and she gave him the arrows and made a little wheel. Made a wheel for him to throw and play (with). And he'd throw it and he'd shoot it with the arrows, way up there. And one day, he watch grandma, and grandma put a bowl of corn or something and carry it and put it in her cupboard. Take it back to the cupboard and then go to work. Left him alone. She left instructions never to throw that wheel up in the air while he was playing. And while she was gone the boy took that wheel and I don't know how big the wheel was, but it was one of those wheels that the Kiowas make when they're playing arrows--they used to throw it and they shoot at it. And this boy said, "Grandma don't want me to throw this wheel in the air. I'm gonna see why." He throwed it up in the air. And the wheel come back with a force and hit him right there (center of head) and divided him
