

you're not no medicine--" "For just that I wish--I put a spell on him and witch him and he'd be sorry he said that." Well, I told him that. Blackmon said, "I'm not afraid of what you could do. You're not no doctor. You're not no witch doctor. You can't do nothing. Tell her I said for her not to be doctoring anybody any more. If I hear about it, I'm going to put you in jail." I told the old lady. "I'm a medicine woman and I don't care what he says. I'll doctor when I please, and it's none of his business and I'm not coming back here any more!" And she got up and walked out. She does some--I don't know how she does it, but she does some mysterious work. I believe I told you one day about her cooking an Indian baloney--seko---and she said it bad luck for her when she's present, for anybody to cook that. Some womans was cooking it and she told them not to do it. "Don't do it when I'm present," she told them. "It's against my rules--my medicine." They wouldn't pay any attention to her. So they was stirring it around, boiling it. It was boiling, that seko... , and just about just about done-- "I told you all to leave it alone and take it out!" They wouldn't do it. Nellie (Guy's present wife) was present them. She said that old lady was sitting around and pick up a stick and that thing turned to a snake and put out its head and started on that woman and she throwed her--upset her pot, too, and run off. And Nellie was present when that happened. I don't know how she dont it, but she did. "I told you not to do it, now." And lots of things like that happened in her life. I don't know how she does it. Well, that's the way Stecker became Indian Agent.

INDIAN POLICE ARRESTING A CADDO MAN

Well, while Stecker was Agent, I was way down south at Mount Scott community. I came up on the train and was at the Office. Stecker said, "I got word that some Caddo young man was making trouble for the camp down here below the Agency. I want three of you men to go down and pick that man up and bring him up here. So me and White Buffalo and Big Joe--all police--well,
