

whether a certain "Eagle" person die. Well, "Eagle"--that time-- I know we're right, no, on this one--Bert Geikoumah in jail (Drawing 93). Because here it is--"Children receive allotment" (Drawing No. 90)--and that must be Bert.

(Now did Bert go to jail before the children were allotted or after?)

I think before. Before. But this calendar is all mixed. Some of these things that happened should have been back here and he got them over there. He's got them all mixed.

(We're supposed to be going back, year by year.)

Well, we proved several instances that they're not according to the way it happened. He just happened to think of those popular things that happened and he put them down so that he could distinguish them. But we know when these happened. We know that the childrens were allotted in 1907 because I was one of the allotting crew members. And that happened before--Bert was already in jail before that. And I'll try to find out about this <sup>te</sup><sup>ne</sup>.

(There might be some other things--this says "Indians allotted land" here-- (Drawing No. 83))

That's 1900. This is 1900 and this is 1907. Seven years afterwards the children were allotted. See, that's 1907, and this (Drawing No. 83) is 1900.

And this is 1901, but he's got it down as 1902. This is where they allotted the Indians--opened the country--in 1901. Well, this is where the officers got killed--the first sheriff and undersheriff--at Ware's house. (Drawing No. 84).

(And look at this one (Drawing No. 85). It says, "Utes come visiting." And it looks like boys or girls or men or women--but it looks like they've got something red in their hair.)

Well, they give them presents--I want to study--let's see, which one--"Eagle"--that's the one I want to study and see who it was. That's (Drawing No. 90) where the children were allotted.

(Another thing I have wondered--if what is written here always matched the
