

back yet. He stays in town here with his sisters.

(What's his first name?)

Orville. Yea, he preferred it here, he preferred to work at that peanut mill (in Anadarko) . But I said, boy, I said, I don't see how you can stand that. That other was easy..it wasn't easy, but it's much easier than what you're doing. I'm not..I didn't..I just told him in a nice way. Well, if he's dissatisfied with that other job, let him go.

(Are the other five kids live here?)

Yes, three live in town. One is in Tucson, Arizona.

(How many grandchildren do you have?)

My wife and I have twenty two. Five girls, the boy's not married. The young one neither. The boy said, I'm kind of scared of marriage. I said, why? He said, I might mistreat my children. I might mistreat my family, I don't want to get married.

(Where did your kids go to school?)

They boy went to Anadarko High School.

(Did any of them go to boarding school?)

Well, I think..let me see...three went to boarding schools about one year, their senior year. But in their first eleven years, they went to public schools.

(Here in Anadarko?)

No, they went..we had a public school about a mile..oh, you saw the sign as you came south from the highway. Western Electric sign. Well the house that sits this way from it, there used to be a school house there. That's where the kids went to school. Then after they
