

you would call them, kind of long leather whips. They just pop it and we know we had to behave. We know we get that.

(What did the Indian families do when their children were bad?)

Oh, I don't they were very bad in them days. I think we learn how to behave, wehn we were told not to do this, not to do that.

(Would any of the families dicipline their children?)

Yeah.

MANNERS AT MEALS:

(How did they do that?)

Oh, they just talk to us. Say, "Don't do this, it's bad, it's no good." They give us good advice, I guess when we was children. We never use to run around and we were taught to sit down and eat. Sit down to the table or sit down where you going to eat. Get up when you get through, not the way they do now. These children just run around eat. They supposed to sit down, eat. We were told never to throw any food..throw it to anybody like you..if I was to give you an apple or an orange and I throw it to you, well it was against their ways. They said, "When you feed a dog, you throw it..you throw their food." Well that's what we had to learn. Not supposed to push your food. Just like if you was kind of angry well you kind of fling your food. Older people thought that wasn't good. And they tell us if anybody throw or pash your food to you, get up, don't eat it. When you feed a dog, you throw it. Now they feed them in dishes. We were taught not to do them things. These dogs, you throw their food to them but not to a person.

PLAYING MARBLES:

(When you were young or just going to school before you get married, what was your favorite thing to do?)
