

(Not clear) I think he left his society in Oklahoma Historical.

(I didn't know.)

You see that started just north of it.

(I didn't think I've shown you that picture, yet. And I don't know if that was him parked here or not. There she is my grandma.)

Oh, look like here's Hap, that's him there I believe.

(No, lie.)

(I better write that down.)

No, wait. Let me be sure though.

(Okay!)

There's the store, down there they call it Cherryville. Down here where the Post Office is now. He had a bank, you know, and a drug store, Jone's Merchantile.

(Do you recall stories about the bank been robbed?)

There is old man Hudson from Tahlequah.

(He robbed it?)

Ho, he was the banker. Oh, I think, it wasn't robbed, I don't think. Just think, he just his finger got sticky, now, I don't know. Don't you put that in there. Cause I don't know. He's living with his wife. Nora, she lives over at school.

(This is Jone's store.)

That's Jone's store, And this would be, I think, the bank in the middle, and the drug store was on the far side on the _____.

(Drug store, and then-----)

Drug store, bank and Jone's Merchantile.

(Any stories you recall?)

No! I don't remember any of those. People by the name of Williams bought
